

The Leader as Coach Masterclass

Theme: 'The Central Elements of Leadership Coaching'

Developing a professional approach to work, amongst your employees, requires time and a dedicated approach. When leaders aim to develop self-determination and foster a sense of responsibility, they do not simply impose their authority, but instead they adopt a more supportive role through which employees are coached.

This session will explore and analyse the central elements of leadership coaching, including a practical look at this approach.

About the Facilitator

Mr Peter Stadler is an experienced leadership and management trainer and coach with professional experience from a number of continents. He advises organisations on leadership, and strategic human resources issues. Stadler has held teaching assignments at ETH Zurich, the University of Applied Sciences Northwestern Switzerland, and the University of Bern. He obtained a PhD from the latter. He currently serves as the Management Development Expert at Swiss Life, Zurich.
