Namibia is currently facing headwinds yet unknown in our young democracy. Policy responses will play a key role in charting a path out of the mire and onto a more sustainable growth path. Often, however, well-intended policies can have undesirable consequences that affect the health of the economy and ultimately filter into local asset prices.

Please join us as Anthea Angermund, Portfolio Manager at Prudential Investment Managers, takes us on a walk down ‘history lane’, to assess how other countries have tackled similar problems and the consequences of their different policy stances.
