REVIEW OF THE ASSIGNMENT

Just like in any other assignments the trend is the same with regarding the Introduction, Objectives, Main Body and Conclusions

Introduction:

An introduction gives the background information into ones topic, why you are writing about the topic and the main ideas that stem from the topic and the order into which you will discussed the assignment. It gives the reader the necessary background for what is to be written.

Some students seem to have a problem in writing the introduction of the assignment. It's either too long or too short. They don't know what to include in the introduction.
Objectives:

Most of them don't know how to formulate Objectives. These are short statements that describe exactly what you want or be able to do. An objective should always start with an active verb.

Main Body:

➢ Tells the reader what the paper is all about.
➢ It should contain a logical development of the assignment.
➢ One must write a well predetermined structured plan.
➢ From here one gradually builds up the case.
➢ As one writes one must keep focus on the problem. One must not get sidetracked.
➢ Some students have a lot of problem with this part.

Conclusion:

The conclusion is the final paragraph of writing an assignment. It must summarize every important idea that has been discussed in ones assignment. It is important to draw a conclusion based upon the evidence presented in the assignment. One needs to make sure they have directly answered the question and it is always useful to link the conclusion back to the assignment.

This is one area that most candidates have not mastered.

Reference:

This one involves citing and referencing. APA style is an author-date style. There must be the in-text author-date citation at an appropriate place within the text of the document e.g (Mubiana, 2010) and the detailed reference list at the end of the of the end assignment.

Students don't really know or haven't yet mastered the APA style of referencing. They need to be taught the APA style of referencing again.
